Saving a flat (non-fillable) copy of a filled-in form

How to save a regular (flat or non-fillable) PDF

This document contains fillable sections. After you fill them in, you need to send it to us as a regular PDF, a copy in which everything you typed is permanent, and the fields can no longer be edited. A regular PDF looks the same as the filled-in form, but the recipient cannot change your entries.

Do not save over the original. Always give the regular copy a new file name so you keep the fillable version in case you need to make changes.

The steps below are the same idea on every computer: print the filled-in form to a regular PDF file instead of to a paper printer. Choose the set of instructions that matches the computer and program you are using:

Windows, using Adobe Reader

1. Open the filled-in PDF in Adobe Reader and press Ctrl+P.
2. In the Printer list, choose Microsoft Print to PDF.
3. Click Print, give the new copy a name, and click Save.

Windows, using your web browser

1. Right-click the filled-in PDF, choose Open with, and pick your browser (Chrome or Edge).
2. Press Ctrl+P.
3. Open the Destination (or Printer) list and choose Save as PDF (or Microsoft Print to PDF).
4. Click Save, give the new copy a name, and click Save again.

Mac, using Preview

1. Open the filled-in PDF in Preview and press Command+P.
2. Click the PDF button at the bottom left of the print window and choose Save as PDF.
3. Give the new copy a name and click Save.

Mac, using your web browser

1. In Finder, right-click the filled-in PDF, choose Open With, and pick your browser (Chrome or Safari).
2. Press Command+P.
3. In Chrome, open the Destination list and choose Save as PDF. In Safari, click the PDF button at the bottom left and choose Save as PDF.
4. Click Save, give the new copy a name, and choose where to keep it.

Do not use Adobe Reader's own Print window on a Mac. It refuses to save a PDF.
